Chapter 397: The Saints' Duty

Gabriel's Sacred Descent

Every hundred years, one of the highest beings in the Heavenly Realm, Gabriel, would descend from the True Absolute One Domain Realm to Earth. This sacred descent was not for mere observation, but to communicate with a select few—individuals who were chosen by the Divine Triad to become the Saints. These individuals were the embodiment of divine will on Earth, tasked with guiding humanity towards the light of truth.

Gabriel, with his immense power and wisdom, would choose these individuals not based on their wealth, status, or influence, but based on their purity of heart, their commitment to righteousness, and their unwavering faith in the Divine Triad. Each Saint, chosen through divine will, would receive an immense surge of power and understanding from Gabriel, enabling them to carry out their sacred duty.

The Saints’ Sacred Duty

The Saints were not mere followers of the Divine Triad; they were their earthly representatives. Their role was multifaceted, and their responsibility was immense.

Guiding the Lost:
One of the primary duties of the Saints was to guide humanity from false praying—to help people distinguish between true devotion to the Divine Triad and the corrupt practices of those who worshipped false gods or malicious beings. There were many on Earth who sought power through deception, manipulation, and worship of dark entities. The Saints, endowed with divine wisdom, would expose these falsehoods and lead people back to the true faith.

Eradicating the Fiends:
In addition to guiding people, the Saints were entrusted with the important task of rooting out fiendish groups—organizations and individuals who dealt in evil, harm, and suffering. These fiendish people trafficked in human and mythical creature slavery, dealing in dangerous drugs, cigarettes, and all manner of vices that corrupted the souls of those who indulged in them. The Saints, with their divine strength and authority, would hunt down and eradicate these dark forces, ensuring that such evil had no place in the world under the Divine Triad's watch.

Creating the Holy Books

Through Gabriel, the Saints would receive direct communication from the Divine Triad, allowing them to receive divine revelations. These revelations would be used to craft Holy Books, sacred texts that contained the teachings, commandments, and sayings of the Divine Triad. These books were not mere words; they were the guiding principles of life, peace, and prosperity, given to humanity as a path to salvation.

The Holy Books would serve not only as a divine manual for the people but also as a record of the Divine Triad’s will on Earth. They were meant to be the ultimate source of truth, teaching people how to live with virtue, how to reject falsehood, and how to serve the Divine Triad with sincerity and devotion.

The Saints' Legacy

As each cycle of Gabriel’s descent came to pass, new Saints would rise to take the place of those who had fulfilled their divine duty. The legacy of each Saint would be immortalized in the Holy Books, passed down through generations of followers, ensuring that the truth of the Divine Triad’s existence and their will was preserved for all eternity.

And with each passing century, the influence of the Divine Triad would spread, not through war or destruction, but through the quiet power of truth, righteousness, and divine guidance. The Saints would be the living vessels of that power, spreading the word and ensuring that the world would remain on the path of light.
